ART ADVISORY

Elizabeth Garvey is a fine art dealer and advisor based in New York City. She began her career with a ten year position at Schmidt Bingham Gallery on 57th Street, acting as co-director before developing her own firm, EKG Art Advisory, in 1999. She assists collectors from all parts of the country to develop and build private art collections. Liz is a member of ArtTable, Inc. ARTTABLE

The forming of garvey | simon ART ACCESS in 2010 with west-coast collector (and sister) Catherine Simon offers a unique ability to work with contemporary artists via an exhibition program, while continuing to offer private art advisory services. As a private advisor, Liz has developed a professional relationship with countless art galleries, auction houses, private dealers, and artists nationwide. The ability to collaborate further with those colleagues, while having a small public space for exhibitions and educational opportunities lies at the heart of GSAA's mission. The collaboration with Littlejohn Contemporary at Suite 207 in Chelsea is indicative of that spirit.

Our space in Chelsea not only offers a quiet and relaxed environment to learn about art, but also a better way to serve existing clients who wish to sell works privately on the Secondary Market. The private viewing room can be used at any time by appointment to view works consigned from other dealers as well as the GSAA and LCA inventories. It offers a way for clients to see a wide variety of material in one spot instead of committing an entire afternoon to gallery-hopping. Private, customized tours to see galleries throughout the city are always available for clients who enjoy that experience.

Initial consultations are complimentary. After that, if you would like to retain our services for advisory work, we have a variety of options, which can vary according to your needs.

ART ADVISORY

The "ART ACCESS" portion of our name is a key to the advisory services we offer. We provide an insider's view of the art world tailored to the specific needs and interests of our clientele. Regardless of budget or space, purchasing fine art is an important event that deserves ample research, careful thought, and lots of looking. With the thousands of artists and galleries in New York alone, searching for the "perfect work of art" can be an intimidating and overwhelming experience.

We assist both established and beginning collectors in purchasing art work that fits within their collecting goals. As educators, we enjoy working with new collectors. Often there is an interest in buying fine art, but a genuine confusion about the workings of the art world or where to begin. We provide personal and professional care to guide and educate beginning collectors. We help clients define their taste in art, and offer a launching place for exploration. At some point in the process, tastes are refined further and as works are acquired the collection takes form.

We work with established collectors in a curatorial role; helping them continue their search for specific additions to their collections and advising them on when and what to sell. We offer database management for large collections, as well as consultation with framing, conservation, museum loans, and de-acquisition.

We want our clients to live with art that will continuously engage and inspire them. Great art has the power to transform and we want the experience of owning something extraordinary to have that effect on all our collectors.
