Conference: College Art Association Annual Conference at New York Hilton Midtown

This year's four-day College Art Association Conference will once again bring together a vast group of academics and professionals to discuss a variety of subjects, from historicizing Cuban art and images of Black Lives Matter to Seth Siegelaub's archive of Conceptual art and decolonizing the basics of art history. Among the events planned for this year's conference is a semi-unofficial one: On Friday, February 17, curator David A. Ross, along with guests including Brooklyn Museum director Anne Pasternak and artist Tim Rollins, will host a talk show at the Hilton Midtown, where the conference will be held.

New York Hilton Midtown, 1335 6th Avenue, 8:30 a.m.–9 p.m. Ticketing rates vary, consult CAA website for pricing information; admission is pay-what-you-wish for one day

Coco Fusco (pictured here as Dr. Zira) will be interviewed by UCLA professor Steven Nelson, as part of CAA's Distinguished Artist Interviews.
