

Art Industry News: François Pinault Unveils Plans for His New Paris Museum + More Must-Read Stories

Plus, Modigliani's VR version of Paris hits Tate Modern and the Met's new director is writing a book.

artnet News, June 27, 2017

French businessmen Francois Pinault (R), his son Francois-Henri Pinault (L) and Paris mayor Anne Hidalgo attend the presentation of the project of the future museum of the Pinault Foundation, on June 26, 2017 at the former stock exchange building in Paris. Photo: PATRICK KOVARIK/AFP/Getty Images.

Art Industry News is a daily digest of the most consequential developments coming out of the art world and art market. Here's what you need to know this Tuesday, June 27.

ART MARKET

Vienna Contemporary Announces 2017 Exhibitors – Considered a gateway to the Eastern European art scene, the Viennese art fair will feature over 100 galleries this year and will have two special sections focusing on art from Hungary and Nordic countries. (Vienna Contemporary)

Palais de Tokyo Plans Satellite Exhibition at Expo Chicago – Thirteen artists will contribute new and existing works that explore the links between art and architecture. They will be shown in the Roundhouse during the sixth edition of the Expo Chicago fair from September 13–17. (ARTnews)

Alexander Gray Adds Valeska Soares to Roster – The New York gallery will now represent the Brazilian installation artist, whose work is held in permanent public collections at the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, the Guggenheim Museum and Tate Modern, among others. (ARTnews)