

The Geometric Poetry of Aakash Nihalani in Vinegar Hill

Published November 01, 2010 by:

Naomi Pattirane

View Profile | Follow | Add to Favorites

More: Randy Moss Obama 2010 election macbook Brett Favre thanksgiving

Aakash Nihalani is an artist like no other, creating new dimensions with negative space utilizing a brightly colored version of the kind of tape that NYPD forensic specialists use to mark victims positions at homicide scenes.

The Geometric Poetry of Aakash Nihalani in Vinegar Hill

Neighborhood: Vinegar Hill

New York, NY 11201

United States of America

His geometric poetry graces the unexpected corners and street pavements of the city, Nihalani wants to "offer people a chance to step into a different New York than they are used to seeing, and in turn, momentarily escape from routine schedules and lives."

His isometric rectangles and squares also adorn his sculptures, paintings and prints which convey another dimension through his eclectic use of color and form. His new exhibition titled 'Overlap' will be featured at Bose Pacia gallery in Vinegar Hill from November 4 - December 18, 2010.

You can view more of his work on his website and Facebook page.

Bose Pacia

163 Plymouth Street

Brooklyn, NY 11201

USA

(212) 989 7074

mail@bosepacia.com

Open Tuesday - Saturday

11.00 am - 6.00 pm