Sue Miller

(b. 1939, New York City)

Letter Paintings

Describing her process, Sue Miller once said, “usually, it is only after the canvas is paint-encrusted and scarred and the image emerges looking more excavated than constructed that I will recognize it to possess a quality that simultaneously seizes me and fulfills me, and allows me to put the painting to rest.”

In her latest work the familiar elements are still there, yet at a closer look the canvas not only shines through, but reveals itself to be letters – letters which unbeknownst to Miller her late husband kept since their high school days.
