EDGE OF ARABIA, IN PARTNERSHIP WITH ART JAMEEL AND THE ISCP, AWARDS ITS FIRST US RESIDENCY TO TAYSIR BATNIJI AND THE ARTIST COLLECTIVE, FOUNDLAND

THE ARTISTS WILL PARTICIPATE IN A 3-MONTH RESIDENCY AT THE ACCLAIMED INTERNATIONAL STUDIO & CURATORIAL PROGRAM IN NEW YORK CITY

New York (May 15, 2014) - Edge of Arabia, in partnership with Art Jameel and the International Studio & Curatorial Program (ISCP), and with additional support from the Zedan Group, has awarded its first artist residency in the United States to Taysir Batniji, a Palestinian artist, and Foundland, an artist collective from Syria and South Africa. A central component of Edge of Arabia's multi-year US Tour, the concurrent 3-month long residencies will allow Batniji and Foundland, comprised of Lauren Alexander and Ghalai Elsrakbi, to take part in the ISCP's acclaimed studio program in Brooklyn from July through September 2014. The programme aims to support the artists' practices and to immerse them in the cultural landscape of New York.

Nearly 200 applications were submitted by artists living and working across the Middle East, including Lebanon, Tunisia, Yemen, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Morocco, Syria, Oman, United Arab Emirates, Sudan, Iran and Algeria. As a continuation of Edge of Arabia's on-going, peripatetic US Tour, the residency program reinforces established goals of connecting Middle Eastern artists with new audiences, and exploring interconnected stories that link ideas and people across physical and psychological borders. The US Tour, originated in partnership with Art Jameel, launched in March 2014 at the FotoFest Biennial in Houston and is traveling through Boston, New York, and Washington D.C. before making the cross-country road trip to the west coast.

"This is an exciting moment for artists from the broader Middle East to enter into dialogue with artists in the US and have the opportunity to expand their practice here," explains Sarah Al-Faour, head of strategy and partnerships for Edge of Arabia. "The strength of applications reflects the depth and diversity of artists living in the region and we are delighted to launch the program with two such dynamic participants. Founded by artists in 2003, Edge of Arabia has made history through pioneering shows across Europe and the Middle East, and it has been paramount to us and our lead partner, Art Jameel, that artists are at the core of this US Tour."

Marking Taysir Batniji's first trip to the US, the residency will open doors to introduce his practice to New York audiences and is self-designed by the artist to center around photography and video production. With a clear set of critical parameters, Foundland will present new installations, participatory talks and film screenings, as part of their ongoing investigation of subjective mapping and storytelling. The ISCP's flexible, high calibre program allows the artists to undertake independent projects and work alongside curators during their residency, as well as join the ISCP's esteemed community of international artists.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

Taysir Batniji (b. 1966, Gaza, Palestine) is an interdisciplinary visual artist who divides his time between France and Palestine. His practice incorporates drawing, painting, installation and performance, often closely related to his heritage - however since 2001 the artist has focused primarily on photography and video. Batniji has participated in numerous international exhibitions, including Untitled, 12th Istanbul Biennial (2011); Future of a Promise, a collateral event of the 54th Venice Biennale (2011); Seeing is Believing, KW Institute for Contemporary Art, Berlin (2011); and RAY 2012 Fotografieprojekte Frankfurt/Rhein-Main (2012). Taysir Batniji is represented by Galerie Sfeir-Semler, Hamburg & Beirut, and by Galerie Eric Dupont, Paris.

Foundland (established 2009) is a collective whose work draws on graphic design, art, writing and research. Comprised of the artists Ghalia Elsrakbi and Lauren Alexander, Foundland focuses on a critical analysis of topics related to political and locational branding through visual and written forms. Since 2011 it has centered more on the Middle East, with special interest in Elsrakbi's homeland, Syria. Foundland has developed an expanding database of visuals and information, gathered from observations of media, activist groups and trends of political expression across social media. Drawing unexpected relations and connections, they create alternative narratives to media reporting through innovative image making and personal interpretation. Foundland has presented in group exhibitions including the Kadist Foundation, Paris (2012); Impakt Festival, Utrecht (2011, 2012); BAK, Utrecht (2012); and the Damascus Visual Arts Festival, Istanbul (2013) - and has presented lecture at Studium Generale ArtEZ, Arnhem; de Appel for Sandberg Institute, Amsterdam; Royal Academy of Arts, The Hague; Rietveld Academie, Amsterdam; and the Athens Biennial 2013. In 2013 they completed an artist residency at the Townhouse Gallery in Cairo.

GHALIA ELSRAKBI (b. 1978, Damascus, Syria) completed a BA Graphic Design at Artez Hogeschool voor de Kunst, Arnhem, followed by a Masters in Design at the Sandberg Institute, Amsterdam. In 2009, she followed a research post-graduate at Jan van Eyck Academy in Maastricht. Since 2011 she has been involved with various activist groups promoting creative dissidence in Syria and since 2013 she has been based in Cairo, Egypt.
