The American Dream is hard at work in the legacy of the Kantor family, whose galleries have forever changed the face of modern art. First came Paul, who is credited for discovering Richard Diebenkorn and other such luminaries starting in the 1950s and for bestowing his birthright on his son, Niels, who recently moved the current Kantor Gallery to a new location in the heart of LA. Niels has modeled his new venue after the storied Zero One Gallery and, like his father, is vaunted for his visionary scoping-out of the creme de la creme of emerging contemporary artists. The unveiling of the new Kantor will, true to form, be nothing short of fabulous, featuring The Art of Punk, with artwork from Raymond Pettibon, Shepard Fairey, Emek, and others. And so it begins.
