

8 Things to Do in New York's Art World Before April 30

By Andrew Russeth, Rozalia Jovanovic, Dan Duray and Michael H. Miller

MONDAY | Screening: Bjarne Melgaard Interviews Leo Bersani, at the Kitchen

The indefatigable Norwegian painter Bjarne Melgaard recorded this interview about homosexuality and politics with cultural critic Leo Bersani for his appearance at the 2011 Venice Biennale. What starts out as a "Charlie Rose–like encounter"—to borrow John Kelsey's description of the piece in Artforum—involves "Melgaard... making digital cocks sprout out of his and Bersani's on-screen bodies, splattering the video with lewd, orgasmic cybergraffiti, and interrupting the conversation with lowbrow bursts of dated MTV..." And that's just the start of it. This is the film's U.S. debut. —

Andrew Russeth

The Kitchen, 512 West 19th Street, New York, 7 p.m.