1. Sean Kelly

Sean Kelly's expertly curated booth eclectically houses works by Mariko Mori, Sun Xun, and James White. It is a must-see at the fair. White's paintings are amazing, ambiguous, yes, but enthralling. Painted photo realistically, they show banal domestic settings, a table with a few glasses, a vanity sink, or a paper bag in a hallway; and they draw you in and hold your interest. But, according to gallery director Janine Cirincione, the popular works at the booth were by Chinese artist Sun Xun (see Sun Xun Finds it Impossible to be a Foreigner in New York). The artist's large book artwork, complete with calligraphy and drawings on paper, had actually been sold the day before.
